

Podcast: Client Confidentiality in the Age of Coronavirus

June 24, 2020

What might be reasonable efforts as required by the lawyer professional conduct rules?

Confidentiality is fundamental to the client-lawyer relationship. It encourages candid communication between client and lawyer and assists the lawyer in more effectively representing the client.

In this episode, McGlinchey General Counsel Christine Lipsey discusses that, in the age of Coronavirus and work from home, there are additional factors for lawyers to consider. We all need to be especially sensitive to maintaining these essential protections.

download transcript

get more episodes

Subscribe wherever you listen to podcasts:

Listen on
Apple Podcasts

Listen on amazon music

Listen on
Google Podcasts

Related people

Christine Lipsey