

Could Porn Star Payoff Lead to Historic Indictment?

March 10, 2023

Former President Donald Trump was invited to testify before a New York grand jury that has been investigating hush money payments made on his behalf during his 2016 presidential campaign, according to a news report. Member Robert Driscoll (Washington, DC) and former U.S. DOJ official weighed in on NewsNation's "On Balance."

What we're talking about is a misdemeanor false business records case, unless they can tie it to being made to facilitate another felony. The legal analysis I've seen... is not exactly what you want if you're going to prosecute a former President of the United States in a high-profile case.

The DOJ... the worst outcome for them is not to indict the former President. The worst outcome is to indict him and lose. They have to be confident, if they bring a case, that they're going to win.
