

Driscoll Discusses Indictment of Sen. Robert Menendez on Fox News

April 04, 2015

FoxNews Member Bob Driscoll was interviewed on Fox News Saturday, April 4, in a segment covering the indictment of Sen. Robert Menendez (D-N.J.). Driscoll, former Deputy Assistant Attorney General and Chief of Staff, Civil Rights Division, U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ), offered insight into the legal and political ramifications of the indictment, specifically regarding its timing, and provided comparisons to similar charges brought against U.S. Senators in the past. Thanks to his background within the DOJ, Driscoll is an in-demand authority on governmental investigations and is often called upon by national news organizations and other media to provide legal insight with regard to DOJ and other governmental agency investigations. He has represented both companies and individuals in several high-profile matters related to charges of corruption, leaking confidential information, and fraud, including civil suits and class action matters. Driscoll has also testified before House and Senate Committees, experience that helps clients know how to prepare and what to expect.
