

Representation of National Bank in Putative Class Action Involving National Homeowner Forbearance Program

October 01, 2012

Represented national bank and subsidiaries in a putative nationwide class action involving a national homeowner forbearance program, alleging that the bank enrolled thousands of troubled homeowners in the program without the borrowers' consent in order to receive incentive fees. The federal district court denied class certification.