Litigation is a last resort. But when my clients find themselves involved in a legal dispute, I work very hard to ensure that they have a successful outcome, with minimal risk and cost. Engineering this outcome takes patience, hard work, and experience, but it is also deeply satisfying when a case concludes in a manner that satisfies my client.

Tarush Anand is a Member in McGlinchey's Houston office in the Litigation practice group. As a seasoned and versatile trial lawyer, he has represented clients from a wide range of industries, some of which include construction, energy, health and fitness, hospitality, insurance, manufacturing, retail, and transportation.

Tarush brings to his matters an extensive level of courtroom experience. He has first-hand experience in every facet of the litigation process, from obtaining emergency temporary restraining orders and injunctions in state and federal courts to trials and appeals. before multiple U.S. Courts of Appeals. Many of his cases have involved issues of first impression, where he helped create law on a given subject. And while Tarush enjoys the challenge of trials and appeals, he maintains a hands-on approach at every stage of the case from its inception.

For fifteen years, Tarush has represented clients in a wide variety of claims, some of which involve:

- Breach of Contract
- Business Disputes
- Business Fraud
- Commercial Leasing
- Construction Defects
- Construction Injuries
- Employment Litigation
- Manufacturer-Distributor Disputes
- Mass Torts
- Product Defects and Recalls
- Serious Personal Injuries
- Wrongful Death

As an aggressive, yet pragmatic courtroom lawyer, he focuses his approach to litigation on developing and implementing strategies tailored to each client’s specific goals and priorities. Where one client may prioritize resolving a dispute quickly, another may be motivated by the lasting impact of setting a precedent. Tarush recognizes that each client will have their own definition of success, which may even change during the course of litigation, and he endeavors to craft and implement a unique strategy tailored to each case at hand. Tarush is the opposite of a one-size-fits-all attorney. Through the development of a genuine partnership, he becomes an integral member of the client’s legal team.

representative experience

- Obtained complete summary judgment as lead counsel in federal court in Utah on behalf of a leading international retailer and a children’s product manufacturer. The case was a products liability case involving a serious brain injury sustained by an infant. The plaintiffs were seeking $13.6 Million in actual damages and at least an additional $10

Million in punitive damages. Succeeded in convincing the court that none of the claims had enough merit to proceed to trial, and further convinced the court to award over $31,000 in court costs to the defendants.

- Prevailed before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit in a premises liability case involving a legal issue of first impression—whether businesses have a duty under Texas law to use an available automatic external defibrillator (AED) on patrons that experience a sudden cardiac arrest on the premises. Succeeded in convincing the Court to affirm the district court’s decision that no such duty exists.
- Presented oral argument before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit in a products liability case involving an alleged traumatic brain injury sustained by an infant; fully prevailed on all issues.
- Served as lead trial counsel in a commercial dispute before the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas in a breach-of-contract case related to the international trading of polymer products. Convinced the Court to find for our client. The Court awarded our client 100% of the claimed damages, plus $150,000.00 in punitive damages, another $150,000.00 in sanctions for discovery misconduct, attorney’s fees, court costs, and interest. The Court also found that the counterclaims brought against our client did not have merit.
- Obtained summary judgment in a wrongful death case involving a legal issue of first impression in Texas. The federal court agreed that Texas law does not impose a duty on a business owner to use an automatic external defibrillator (AED) on patrons, even if the business has an AED on its premises.
- Serving as national counsel for an international product manufacturer and managing its entire litigation docket across numerous states.
- Obtained a unanimous defense jury verdict in federal court as lead counsel for a product manufacturer and retailer. The case was a products liability case involved a depressed skull fracture suffered by an eight-month-old child and allegations of a mild-to-moderate traumatic brain injury with the risk of developmental problems in the future. The plaintiffs claimed strict products liability, negligence, and gross negligence. The jury found that the product was not defective and that the defendants were not negligent. This defense verdict was selected for inclusion in the list of 2013 Top Texas Defense Verdicts as reported by VerdictSearch.

- Obtained a unanimous jury verdict as lead trial counsel for a restaurant chain in a breach of contract case related to the sale of one of its restaurant locations.
- Counseled a product manufacturer through a voluntary product recall conducted in several countries.

- Obtained summary judgment on behalf of a large, international chain of fitness centers in a premises liability case, and subsequently convinced the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to affirm the decision.
- Obtained an injunction in federal court on behalf of an international product manufacturer against its U.S. distributor after the distributor suggested it would disrupt supply to major retailers.
