My clients often come to me with complex problems that require creative solutions. In fact, a longtime client and friend recently told me that my greatest legal talent is taking on a complicated case and ‘putting out the dumpster fire.’ I take that as a compliment.

Will Wojcik is a veteran litigator and trial lawyer. He has prosecuted and defended claims in state, federal, appellate, and administrative courts, including numerous jury trials. A multi-talented attorney, Will’s diverse practice extends from managing complex commercial litigation to serving as clients’ outside general counsel, advising on all aspects of corporate, transactional, governance, and tax matters. He also provides counsel on construction defect, real estate, contract, and zoning disputes.

Will enjoys working with a variety of businesses and people. His clients range from entrepreneurs and startup companies to the C-Suite of large, national entities. He feels most satisfied when he can navigate his clients through complicated problems.

Skilled at managing rapidly-developing issues in real-time, Will finds the investigation aspect of representation particularly rewarding. He asks the relevant questions that quickly get to the heart of a case. He also has experience handling First Amendment issues that arise at the intersection of public universities and the private rights of students.
