

Litigation

Litigation is about framing issues and creating a persuasive, compelling story for the trier of fact, be that a judge, jury, or arbitrator. Those abilities also are required in convincing an appellate court that must evaluate which legal principles should be applied to the underlying facts.

McGlinchey's litigation lawyers excel in working with our clients to investigate the facts and frame the case and legal issues to create powerful themes, potent briefs, and forceful arguments at both the trial and appellate levels.

A deep understanding of the client's business is critical to success in litigation. McGlinchey lawyers not only have in-depth knowledge of a variety of businesses—such as corporate, construction, financial institutions, real estate, commercial lending, insurance, heavy industry, manufacturing, aviation, admiralty, chemical and energy, health care, automotive, and chemical and mechanical engineering—but we also have a detailed understanding of the legal issues these businesses face, such as class actions, labor and employment, cyber security, creditors rights, bankruptcy, government investigations, patents, and intellectual property.

McGlinchey's litigation practice is positioned to assist our clients whenever the need arises, with offices across the country in the nation's ports, energy corridors, manufacturing, and banking centers, and with lawyers able and willing to travel at a moment's notice to be on-site.

Conveying sophisticated concepts and weaving those into a compelling story is what we do.

Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR)

McGlinchey attorneys represent clients in complex, major arbitration and mediation proceedings. As ADR counsel, we have experience in nearly every type of mediation and arbitration issue, including healthcare, commercial litigation, real estate, construction, products liability, and financial litigation. ADR often reduces client risks and can avoid the publicity and the public records that litigation brings. We work with clients to prepare and train them for the process and to draft contract provisions, including those involving international dispute resolution.

Appeals

General counsel, national companies, and other trial lawyers look to McGlinchey for representation in high-stakes cases involving complex and cutting-edge appellate issues. Our appellate attorneys have briefed, argued, and won cases before the United States Supreme Court, U.S. Circuit Courts of Appeal, and numerous state appellate and supreme courts. A number of these cases have involved issues of first impression that impact broad swaths of the country and numerous businesses, including issues arising from commercial transactions, constitutional challenges, statutory interpretation, and the scope of financial regulation.

Asbestos and Toxic Torts

With a wide range of technical backgrounds and significant trial experience, we have represented defendants in high-stakes, high-value asbestos and toxic torts litigation in some of the most challenging jurisdictions nationwide. We have defended claims of exposure involving silica, asbestos, welding fumes, aromatic hydrocarbons, benzene, toluene, and xylene, among others. We work closely with an extensive network of well-regarded scientists, engineers, and other experts to serve our clients' interests and achieve their goals.

Aviation and Aerospace

Our aviation and aerospace team represents manufacturers of aircraft (fixed-wing, rotary, hot air balloons), spacecraft, and satellites, airports (commercial and private), fixed base operators, commercial air carriers, and insurers. We advise on a variety of matters, including contractual and operational issues, service contracts, casualty matters, government contracts and government relations, asset purchases and sales, mergers and acquisitions, creditors rights, bankruptcy, restructuring, recovery of aviation collateral, intellectual property, data privacy, airline disputes with passengers, and insurance coverage.

Energy, Chemical, and Industrial Services

The McGlinchey trial lawyers have a thorough knowledge of the upstream, midstream, and downstream aspects of the energy industry. Our litigators represent oil, gas, and energy clients, including chemical and petrochemical companies, in domestic litigation and alternative dispute resolution. We not only have worked with most major international oil and gas companies, but we also represent oilfield service companies, offshore drilling companies, pipeline companies, power companies, and utilities.

Class Action Defense

As nationally recognized leaders in high-profile, high-stakes class action cases, McGlinchey litigators defend financial institutions, insurers, consumer goods manufacturers, and employers facing class action and multidistrict lawsuits.
